ALM AND COURTROOM VIEW NETWORK PARTNER TO BRING ONLINE COURTROOM VIDEO TO LITIGATORS, LAW FIRMS AND LAW SCHOOLS

NEW YORK (September 17, 2007) – ALM, a leading media company serving legal and business professionals, and Courtroom View Network (CVN), a legal news organization providing video coverage of newsworthy and precedent-setting legal proceedings, today announced a new partnership, designed to bring courtroom proceedings, including live and archived online video of courtroom proceedings, to litigators, law firms, in-house counsel, financial analysts and law schools. Under the agreement, ALM and CVN will identify major civil trials, hearings, and oral arguments for video coverage, and package and market live and archived video for use in trial preparation, expert witness evaluation, and education and training. Video will also be used to enhance news coverage on ALM's Law.com network.

Video products and services will be available through www.courtroomview.com and the Law.com network, allowing subscribers to view full trials or key elements such as opening and closing arguments and expert witness testimony, along with all exhibits presented to the jury. Attorneys can use video to evaluate opposing counsel, assess witness credibility and effectiveness, and analyze related litigation to assist in trial preparation. Video can also be used by in-house counsel to track trial progress, by law schools for teaching in conjunction with classroom work, and by law firms for in-house training of associates.

"We believe that courtroom video will represent a significant new addition to ALM's already substantial legal practice offerings for attorneys," said Jack Berkowitz, senior vice president at ALM. "Courtroom View Network has extensive experience in working with courts across the country to obtain video taping access and in the technical areas of video recording, as well as storage and distribution technologies. Our new partnership will allow us to combine this expertise with ALM's strong relationships with the legal profession and marketing capabilities."

"ALM knows how to deliver relevant information to the legal industry, and they are the perfect partner to expand the audience and capabilities of our unique video services. We are already working closely with ALM on next generation product offerings, and we expect the developments to have a huge impact in the market," said Louis Goldberg, Chief Operating Officer at CVN.

ALM currently provides a range of products and services used by attorneys in their daily practice, including verdict and settlement research, information on expert witnesses, court calendars, online professional education and reference books and newsletters.
